Question 1: Is a decedent's estate qualified to file for bankruptcy?

1. Yes
2. No

MIDWESTERN BANKRUPTCY INSTITUTE

Question 1: Is a decedent's estate qualified to file for bankruptcy?

Answer: No. Only a "person" that resides or has a domicile, a place of business, or property in the United States, or a municipality may file for bankruptcy.11 U.S.C. Sec. 109(a).

A decedent's estate does not meet the definition of a "person" under Section 101(41) or the subset definitions of an "entity" or "corporation" under Sections 101(15) and 101(9), respectively.

General Facts:

- Ernest Taplin, a widower, died intestate and left his son, California state prisoner Ernest Jubar Taplin as his heir.
- The imprisoned son gave his mother, Shirley Andrade, a power of attorney to handle his inheritance issues.
- On December 13, 2021, Attorney Foyil filed a chapter 11 petition under the incorrect name "Estate of Von Taplin, Ernest." (Von was decedent's middle name).

General Facts:

- The Petition signed by Attorney Foyil and Andrade (the Special Representative) asserted decedent's estate was a "corporation" with "0-$50,000" in assets and liabilities.
- Only a mortgagee and a foreclosure agent were listed as creditors.
- Attorney disclosed a $4,000.00 retainer from an undisclosed "other."

The Amended Petition also claimed to be "required to file periodic reports with the Securities and Exchange Commission."

- Court's Sanctions – Deterrence
- "The purpose of sanctions under Rule 9011 is to deter rather than to compensate. Fed.R.Bankr.P. 9011(c)(2)."
- Accordingly, Rule 9011(c) requires that sanctions be limited to that which is "sufficient to deter repetition of such conduct or comparable conduct by others similarly situated." Fed.R.Bankr.P. 9011 (c) (2); accord, Fed.R.Civ.P. 11 (c) (4) . Tailoring necessitates case-by-case treatment.

- Court's Sanctions – Deterrence
- Permissible sanctions may include an order to pay a penalty into court, as well as directives of a nonmonetary nature. Fed.R.Bankr.P. 9011(c)(2).
- Unfortunately for Attorney and Special Representative, a recent popularity of improper decedent's estate cases led the court to calculate the penalty to be paid into court with an eye to deterring others "similarly situated" from baseless filings.

MIDWESTERN BANKRUPTCY INSTITUTE

In Re Estate of Taplin, 641 B.R. 236 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2022)

- Court's Sanctions – Deterrence
- Attorney accepted a $4,000 fee to file a Petition with no merit and for an improper purpose. The court noted Attorney had been counsel in more than 2,000 bankruptcy cases since 1996, and he admitted to having made no pre-filing inquiry into the question of eligibility to be a debtor, and no post-filing inquiry into eligibility even after the court called the matter to his attention by way of an OSC.
- He "later advocated" his frivolous position by filing an unresearched Amended Petition "more ludicrous than the first Petition."

MIDWESTERN BANKRUPTCY INSTITUTE

In Re Estate of Taplin, 641 B.R. 236 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2022)

- Court's Sanctions – Deterrence
- The court found:
- Deterring the Attorney's initial disregard of Rule 9011 warranted adding $2,000 to the $4,000 penalty related to the fee attorney accepted.
- Attorneys "later advocating" the same frivolity in an Amended Petition filed for an improper purpose elevated his to defiance that merited adding another $2,000 in sanctions.

MIDWESTERN BANKRUPTCY INSTITUTE

In Re Estate of Taplin, 641 B.R. 236 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2022)

- Court's Sanctions – Deterrence
- The court further found:
- "The parade" of 17 decedent's estate cases in the judicial district since November 2019 reveals that there are "others similarly situated" in need of deterrence. A situation exacerbated by the abusive pattern of cases being filed without payment of the filing fee, which cases are dismissed before the fee is collected.

Bankruptcy Courts Power to Sanction Under: (1) Statutory Civil Contempt Authority Under Section 105(a), and (2) Inherent Sanction Authority

- Federal courts' have inherent authority to sanction for bad faith conduct. This authority includes bankruptcy courts.
- Section § 105(a) also provides a bankruptcy court with broad authority to "exercise its equitable powers - where 'necessary' or 'appropriate' - to facilitate the implementation of other Bankruptcy Code provisions." This gives bankruptcy courts the "inherent power to sanction abusive litigation practices."
- However, § 105(a) does not "allow the bankruptcy court to override explicit mandates of other sections of the Bankruptcy Code" or to "contravene specific statutory provisions."

- The Trustee sought sanctions against attorney, Stanley under Rule 9011 and § 105(a) for his bad faith conduct and for the express misrepresentations and material omissions in the Petition, Schedules, and Statements filed by him with the Court.
- The Trustee asserted Stanley filed the Petition not for the purpose of appropriately addressing the Debtor's debts through the bankruptcy process but, rather, for the improper purpose of unnecessarily delaying the ultimate enforcement of two judgments and avoiding subpoenas entered in the State Court Action.

- Stanley was perhaps unaware of Weintraub and its greater implications when he emailed Ms. Holbrook, a member of the Debtor:
- "The state superior court judge ruled against us on the subpoenas. We could challenge his ruling by means of a special action (cost, $2 to 5K) …alternatively, we could just go ahead with putting BCB Contracting into Ch. 7 bankruptcy ($1,250 to start - and that should be about it unless Csontos/Khoshbin gets involved in the bankruptcy case and succeeds in getting the bankruptcy trustee to try to pursue you for money or property allegedly diverted from BCB Contracting)."

- The next day, Stanley stated in a follow-up email to Mrs. Holbrook:
- "We should file the bankruptcy by the end of next week to avoid the need to comply with the subpoenas."

- The emails and Mrs. Holbrook's testimony supported the Court's finding that Stanley filed the Petition in bad faith and for the improper purpose of avoiding subpoenas in the State Court Action, delaying a creditor from collecting on his judgment, and acting as a substitute for appealing the State Court's order denying the Motion to Quash the Subpoenas and posting a bond for the appeal.
- Moreover, Stanley failed to make a reasonable inquiry as to the information in the Schedules and Statements (outlined in the opinion).
- Taken together, these facts supported the Court finding Stanley's filing of the Petition, Schedules, and Statements were frivolous.

- An attorney may not delegate his duty to validate the truth and legal reasonableness of papers filed with the court.
- The signing attorney cannot leave it to another to satisfy himself that the filed paper is factually and legally responsible; by signing he represents not merely the fact that it is so, but also the fact that he personally applied his own judgment.... - The Bankruptcy Court also found that Stanley acted in bad faith by his conduct throughout the proceeding and engaged in abusive litigation tactics after the case was filed.
- Stanley, Debtor, (and Holbrook) got the benefit of the automatic stay to thwart a creditor's collection efforts yet failed to fulfill the debtor's duties imposed by the Code.

- Trustee had to file motions to compel before documents that were the subject of his Rule 2004 examinations were produced. Trustee was also forced to subpoena bank records.

- A year into the proceeding, the Debtor had yet to file a Ch. 11 disclosure statement and plan, so the Bankruptcy Court ordered the parties to show cause why the proceeding should not be dismissed or converted into a Chapter 7 liquidation.
- Debtor admitted that "the only reason [it] filed the…bankruptcy [was] to secure a stay so that [it could] pursue its appeal in State Court without losing the property at issue."
- Because it had not been successful in securing that relief, it sought dismissal of its Ch. 11 case.

- The Bankruptcy Court refused to dismiss the case because it believed it was in the best interest of the creditors and the estate to convert to Ch.7 liquidation and appoint a trustee to manage the estate.
- Soon thereafter, the Ch. 7 Trustee moved to sell the Debtor's only known asset, the multi-family house.
- The Court approved the property's public sale for $725,000 two months later.

- After the conversion, and over a year and half after the Debtor declared bankruptcy, Debtor's counsel filed its first and only Fee Application, seeking payment of $31,819 in fees and expenses from the Debtor.
- Notably, the Fee Application also disclosed that KKT, without Bankruptcy Court approval, had already received payments totaling $19,400 from the "personal bank account" of Quan - Debtor's sole shareholder - as "prepayment for the legal services rendered" to the Debtor.

- Counsel attempted to characterize the payments as something other than an unauthorized loan incurred by the Debtor.

- Rule 1.9 concerns obligations to former clients and states, absent consent, "[a] lawyer who has formerly represented a client in a matter shall not thereafter represent another person in the same or a substantially related matter in which that person's interests are materially adverse to the interests of the former client." Model Rules of Pro. Conduct r. 1.9; see also Model Rules of Pro. Conduct r. 1.10 (extending the obligations of Rules 1.7 and 1.9 to all attorneys within the same firm).

- The Court of Appeals found the Bankruptcy Court DID NOT err by not also evaluating the dual representation under Rules 1.7 and 1.9 of the MRPC.
- Holding "Section 327 and the Rules of Professional Conduct impose independent obligations," and the "[p]rofessional conduct rules may be relevant and 'consulted when they are compatible with federal law and policy . . . .
- Although ethics rules "may be informative in some cases," the Third Cir. Court of Appeals (at least) has never stated that violations of the Rules of Professional Conduct are themselves sufficient to create a § 327 conflict."

- Further, the Court of Appeals noted, disqualification is never automatic.
- "Even when an ethical conflict exists (or is assumed to exist) [under state ethics rules], a court may conclude based on the facts before it that disqualification is not an appropriate remedy."

- Considerations for when a court should not disqualify counsel (even if a conflict is assumed to exist), would include:
- the ability of litigants to retain loyal counsel of their choice,
- the ability of attorneys to practice without undue restriction,
- preventing the use of disqualification as a litigation strategy, and
- preserving the integrity of legal proceedings, and preventing unfair prejudice.
- "Sometimes disqualification is more disruptive than helpful even though an attorney may not have satisfied his or her professional obligations," according the Court of Appeals.

- A Word or 100 about "Disinterested Hot Potato"
- Consider the case where a law firm drops an existing client (a bank, an insurance company) to avoid conflicts that would prevent it from taking on a more lucrative client (a potentially large Ch. 11debtor).
- Under this concept—known as the "hot potato" doctrine—courts are to apply the more stringent Rule 1.7 standards even though representation has formally ended to discourage firms from dropping a client (like a hot potato) for self-interested reasons. (See Merck Eprova AG v. ProThera, Inc., 670 F. Supp. 2d 201, 209 (S.D.N.Y. 2009)).
